SAFETY CERTIFICATION

ANSI Z87.1-2020 (USA)

This American standard ensures that eyewear provides reliable protection against impact, non-ionizing radiation, and liquid splash exposures. Eyewear certified to ANSI Z87.1-2020 is tested for high-mass and high-velocity impact resistance, making it ideal for industrial and construction settings

EN 166 (Europe)

EN 166 is the European standard for personal eye protection. It guarantees that the glasses meet strict requirements for optical clarity, robustness, and protection against mechanical risks such as flying particles, dust, and chemical splashes. This certification ensures consistent performance across a range of hazardous environments.

CSA Z94.3

The CSA Z94.3 standard, published by the Canadian Standards Association (CSA), is a Canadian safety standard for eye and face protectors. It covers various types of eye and face protection equipment, including safety glasses, goggles, face shields, and welding helmets, and sets requirements for their design, performance, and marking.
